"What's My Line?" Just call me "Line" Chaney Jr., The Man of A Thousand Creases. I went to sleep for a couple centuries and woke up looking like Rip Van Winkle! But I'll tell you one thing: in this magazine nobody sleeps!

FOUR SCARE and 7 fears ago
Our four fathers brought forth
Upon this continent a new magazine,
Conceived in lunacy and dead-icated
To the proposition that ALL MONSTERS ARE CREATED!

—These are the famous Lost Words that the Missing Lincoln spoke just after The Incident of the Chopped Down Cherry Tree. Queried as to why he had put it down, Gorgo Washington replied: "I cannot tell a lie—it was because You Axed For It!"

Well, we here at FAMOUS MONSTERS have long since ceased to be engaged in a mighty struggle for survival. We are now 11 issues old.

Your Editor was tremonstrously flattered on his 44th birthday, last Thanksgiving, to be presented with a 44 page magazine (cover reproduced above) created especially for the occasion by Larry Byrd & Ron Haydock, co-editors of the amateur (but not amateur-ish) monsterzine Terror and its companion, Escape. In addition to contributions by Ray Bradbury and Fritz Leiber, the magazine featured an editorial which stated in part: "The format of this zine is taken from FAMOUS MONSTERS OF FILMLAND, a magazine which has become a smashing success across the nation."

As we look forward to issues No. 12, 13 and onward, we envision nothing but continuing success with a series of smashing articles that we are even now negotiating for, including "The Clown at Midnight" by Robert Block, "Monsters and Monster Lovers" by Fritz Leiber, "The Beasts of Tarzan" by Vernell Coriell and "The Thing from Another World" (classic fiction) by John W. Campbell Jr.

We're going strong; grow along with us.

BECAUSE Dr. Acula couldn't make up his minds (one in each head) this time, instead of the usual 3 prizes for Best Letters we are giving 4! ROBERT FEINSTEIN of Brooklyn, JOHN PARNUM of Philly, Texan DOUG TRAHAN of Houston and fan HANS NINTZEL (Bklyn rides again!) have each received with Forrest J. Ackerman's compliments an autographed copy of the British BOOK OF WEIRD TALES which he has edited,

BRAVE MAN & TRUE FAN

Since I own a complete set of FAMOUS MONSTERS, I feel I know you pretty well by now. First let me state that FM is my favorite magazine, and that I am writing this letter to see if I can help you to make it even more enjoyable. (Bob then gives a detailed analysis, citing pages and numbers where he felt past issues could have been improved, and these recommendations have been carefully studied in the editorial office.) Suggestions for the future: the life stories of Theda Bara (she was a vamp, Bob, not a vampire), John Carradine, Rondo Hatton, Tor Johnson, Lon Chaney Jr. (request granted in this issue), Peter Lorre, Claude Rains and other horror greats. Why not have one biography each issue? (Not enough worthy subjects to last for the many many years we expect to be publishing. Therefore, you will find a biography every 2 or 3 issues. Probably Peter Lorre next.) Why not assemble all the photographs of werewolves in one special article—still from THE WOLF-MAN, WEREWOLF OF LONDON, UNDYING MONSTER, the unfortunate werewolf Andres from RETURN OF THE VAMPIRE, Bela Lugosi as the werewolf in ISLAND OF LOST SOULS, I WAS A TEENAGE WEREWOLF and many more. (A practical idea for future consideration. However, Lugosi was not a werewolf in ISLAND OF LOST SOULS—he did not have the lycanthropic ability of turning back and forth between wolf and man; he was a wolf whose evolution had been scientifically sped up thru thousands of years so that he became a manwolf.) How about a special article on space creatures? A comparison of the Chaney, Laughton and Quinn Hunchbacks of Notre Dame? An article showing pictures and comparing Mighty Joe Young, King Kong and Son of Kong? Why don't you concentrate more on the pictures from the 20s and 30s? (The older the movies the more difficult to locate fotos from them to illustrate them.) By the way, I actually ● Friend Wahrmann, we suspect you are either pulling our legs or our heads. Your friend Mr. Kopf wouldn't be the son of JANUS KOPF, would he? See our JEKYLL-HYDE feature in this issue for references to other 2-faced individuals.

FRIGHT FANNES FIGHT!

Your magazine is fabulous. I have 3 girls who all fight to see the pictures. I have just sent for 2 back issues and will soon subscribe. Give us more of this type of magazine and can the sexy, girly type. Better our kids—teenagers included—get interested in good clean monsters!

MRS. LILYANNE LIMA
NEWPORT, RHODE ISLAND

● Thank you, Mrs. Lima! Rest assured that all our monsters are of the cleanest quality imaginable as Count Karlon Torgosi himself personally gives them a bat every Satyr Day Nite.

ACKERMAN, GO HOME!

As an "aficionado" (see, I can use the word properly) of the old-fashioned horror movie, I am very pleased to see that you are attempting to turn your magazine into something that the serious horror fan can eagerly await and enjoy from the poor collection of high school type puns that beloved F. J. Ackerman seems to think his "fuzzy-faced" audience thrives on. I'm no teenager any more but I believe that Mr. Ackerman underestimates his teenage audience. The majority would enjoy some real information about the horror movies. I also believe you would attract more adult fans such as myself. I only buy your magazine occasionally for the biographies of the stars and the plots of the old movies; but the new policy, if implemented, would force me to subscribe. I believe you are making a big mistake in "talking down" to your teenage audience's level as interpreted by Mr. Ackerman. He is capable of much better writing than he currently produces in your magazine. By all means give Ackerman a rest or make him lift his standards and help make your magazine worthy of the support and enjoyment of the many true horror fans that have no periodical to represent them at the present time.

SIDNEY H. BROWN
BRONX, N. Y.

● This is the publisher, James Warren, responding. Let's see if I can set the facts straight once and for all. No one was more disappointed than Forest J. Ackerman when I had to break the news to him that not only could I not use his title of WONDERAMA but that the magazine would have to be slanted at young teens rather than adults. He almost backed out of the project then and there, and without him FAMOUS MONSTERS would never have been born. The decision was not even mine: it was forced on us both in order to obtain distribution on the newsstands. Do you understand that? I could have produced the imaginative movie magazine Forry Ackerman dreamed of and was capable of creating in literate fashion for cinema scholars and fantasy enthusiasts, but it wouldn't have done him or you or me any good stacked up in a warehouse undistributed! I never anticipated more than one issue but FM No. 1 was such a runaway success that I commissioned Forry to prepare a second number; only now, to his despair, I instructed him to lower the level of writing this decision being based on the fan mail received. I hope I am putting across the point that he had no choice, and not because I am a villain, or hate adults, but because my principal motivation for publishing FM is to make money. Purists often lose track of this fact when making impractical demands like "drop all the advertising". For my money, Forry has done a heroic job with the magazine. Those who attempted to imitate him—World Famous Creatures, Monster Parade, Screen Chills, Monsters & Things and The Frankenstein Journal—all failed. But you are now holding in your hands the 11th issue of a magazine that was only expected to last one issue, and there is every reason to believe "there'll always be a FAMOUS MONSTERS"—at least as long as I can get Forry Ackerman to go on writing it for me . . . and you. No one who has ever read his Lon Chaney story, "Letter to an Angel"; his oft-reprinted and translated "Mute Question"; or any of his many articles and stories in adult periodicals under his own name and pen names such as Weaver Wright and Spencer Strong;—no one acquainted with his work outside FM can doubt that Forrest J. Ackerman can indeed write. But the point I want to hammer home over and over again is that even if Robert Bloch or Irving Glassman or Boris Karloff were to be Editor of FAMOUS MONSTERS, they would have to comply with my instructions as publisher or else there would be no magazine. But we are strong enough now to begin to experiment a bit in the direction of more mature material and I can assure you no one is more pleased than Forry Ackerman himself. You should be gratified with our new companion publication SPACEMEN, which starts off with its #1 issue (see page 48) on a higher level than it was possible with FM.—J.W.

FRANKEN'S TRINA

THE HALL OF THE FAUST OF USHER

I am in the 9th grade and our English class is studying the life and works of Edgar Allan Poe. (Then the first thing you should know, young friend, is that Poe's middle name was spelled Allan—rhymes with Slan.) Last week I took the 9th issue of FM to my English teacher because of the article "The Fall of the House of Usher", which was one of Poe's greatest works. Do you know what my teacher did? (If you will send us the ashes of your burned copy we will send you a replacement free of charge.) He read the book cover to cover and cut out the article on Poe like a mad executioner! (What?!) And tacked it to our bulletin board, ruining my magazine. Can you beat that?

PHIL WIYEK
BALTIMORE, MD.

● Once a cutup always a cutup. Reminds me of the time when I was in the 9th grade and an instructor tacked me on the bulletin board.—FJA

THE BANTAM FANTOM

SERIOUS SUGGESTIONS

In recent issues you have been featuring photographs from foreign movies. I dislike these because they neither remind me of past films I have seen nor give me glimpses of films I might see in the future. The Scream Test should be replaced by a real test with proper answers. And leave the jokes and gags for the clods at MAD. Underneath the photos try replacing the gags with information about the film, particularly the year of release. How can the stars and producers of horror films be reached? What was the FLAME BARRIER? GIANT BEHEMOTH? Was there a movie called "1984" or "1998" or the like? How many Monster movies have been made in the USA since '45?

HAROLD DEWHIRST
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

● See next letter for an opposite opinion about the value of scenes from foreign films. We'll try a real Scream Test in the near future. Starting with #12 we'll give more info along with the stills. We're not sure the players in and producers of horror pix want to be contacted by the public. But if Wm. Castle, Alex Gordon, Bill Alland, Boris Karloff, Bert Gordon, Vincent Price, Lon Chaney Jr. or any other monStars or monster makers wish to reveal their whereabouts via our pages we'll be very happy to publish their mailing addresses. BEYOND THE FLAME BARRIER was an undistinguished film about some interplanetary substance that fell to earth on an artificial satellite and looked like it was going to be a menace to mankind for awhile. It never got out of a cave, and in the end was electrically eradicated as I recall. GIANT BEHEMOTH was another Godzilla-type cha-cha-cha. In asking for a summation of how many monster movies have been made in the last 15 years you are merely asking for several hundred dollars' worth of a researcher's time; you realize that, don't you? Fortunately the work has been covered in Walter W. Lee Jr's 77-pg Science-Fiction and Fantasy Film Checklist of Summer 1958, a very few copies of which are still available at $2.50 a piece from J. Forester Eckman at 915 South Sherbourne Dr., Los Angeles 35, Calif.

FAVORS FOREIGN FILMONSTERS

There is one outstanding service I want to congratulate you on: the inclusion in your pages of pictures and information about the horror movies being made in Mexico, France, Germany, Italy and elsewhere. I find it intensely interesting to compare foreign concepts of monsters with our home-grown (it's catching!) creatures.

ALICIA ARIA
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

● We leave it to you and Harold Dewhirst to get together and settle your differences of opinion—and may the best monster win!

sinking sensation

Geo Pal has found ATLANTIS, THE LOST CONTINENT, and will soon display his fabled island of marvels to the public.

Pal, himself, described ATLANTIS to me before the preview as "science fiction in the past."

If you liked the sea raider of Capt. Nemo in Disney's 20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA, you will thrill to the metal fish form of Pal's Atlantean submarine.

If you remember Wells' "Island of Dr. Moreau", or Chas. Laughton's House of Pain on THE ISLAND OF LOST SOULS, you will chill to see the reverse of evolution (in color) in ATLANTIS, as men are hypnotically regressed in the House of Fear until they turn into manimals—hairy creatures with clawed hands who can still shamble upright but whose heads have the horns of bulls, the snouts of pigs, the pointed ears of other beasts.

If you enjoyed the Victorian construction of the Time Machine in Pal's last picture of the same name, you'll be pleased by the appearance of the green-crystal destructor machine which shoots a red beam of vaporization that disintegrates everything in its path—ships, statues, people, winged men . . . anything and anybody except the villain. Oh, the villain gets wiped out by his own weapon, alright, but he doesn't go up in a hot puff of smoke like all else the death-ray touches, perhaps because his hide is so tuff the ray can only skim away his skin and blood, leaving him in all his bare wickedness, mere sin and bones.

Were flying men mentioned a minute ago? Yes. these aerial policemen with their Icarian cloaks constitute a genuine flying squad, like flyers out of FLASH GORDON.

Spectacle-wise, ATLANTIS is prodigal. You'll see QUO VADIS-size crowds, ant-hordes from THE NAKED JUNGLE, Pompeian pyrotechnics and the greatest coming up

Shooting for the sky is MGM with its $150,000 purchase of the priceless talent of Ray Bradbury (whose "Life on Other Worlds" feature millions read in LIFE late last year). The incomparable Bradbury has been busy on the Studio lot transforming a number of his most fotogenic Mars plots into a screenplay of his oft-published collection of short classics known as THE MARTIAN CHRONICLES. Cinerama is hinted for this Special.

KING KONG himself will return after an absence of a whole generation to thrill the world anew in an adventure with Prometheus. Original animator maestro Willis O'Brien will handle the very special Special Effects for this one. If it's as good as its daddy, they'll be televising revivals of it on Space Stations and the Moon by the time 1961's newborns are teenagers!

Scriptwork on RIP VAN WINKLE IN THE 21st CENTURY has been handed Jim Harmon, man who must be sci-fi field's hottest property according to Horace (Galaxy) Gold's description of him as "a Vesuvius of a talent . . . good for a giant flow of flaming literary lava for decades to come."

really BIG ONES

Just hear Ed Sullivan in your mind's ear as we tell you about:

A. Merritt's 7 FOOTPRINTS TO SATAN, picked for English production!

A sequel planned to THE TIME MACHINE! (RETURN OF THE TIME TRAVELER).

Remake scheduled of THE OLD DARK HOUSE (it originally starred Karloff, Laughton and Massey).

Karloff, Rathbone, other Horror Greats being sought for cameo roles in THE SCARAB, which brings together Frankenstein, Jack the Ripper, Dr. Jekyll, Sherlock Holmes and many others in the most monstrous box-office attraction ever contrived for marquee-busting.

THE LOST WORLD finds a followup feature planned for itself.

Four Black Sheep do their stuff in THE BLACK SLEEP. That's Lon Chaney Jr. playing Mario Lanza hitting a Hi "C"; Tor Johnson plays Baldilocks with the zipper on the back of his head in case he wants to get some brains; and the beard boy is John Carradine, who finds the whole proceedings as funny as a crutch.

the hidden face of horror

THE MASK OF THE DEMON is adapted from a short story, "The Vij", by Russian writer Nicolai Gogol. The picture opens in the 18th century at the grim trial of Princess Vajda, accused of witchcraft. The chief deputy of the jury is the Princess' own brother and before dying the sorceress puts a curse on her entire family.

A century later a Dr. Choma and his young assistant Gorodec on their way to Moscow pass thru an eerie forest dominated by a huge old castle. Despite the admonition of Nikita, the frightened coach driver who tries desperately to warn the men against the accursed place, the two enter the castle. Deep in a dark and crumbling catacomb the pair discovers the grave of the sorceress. In a coffin, her face covered by a mask of bronze, lies the hundred-years-dead body of the witch.

Dr. Choma is surprised, in removing the mask, to find preserved the face of a beautiful woman. During the removal of the brass covering the doctor is slightly wounded and some drops of blood fall into the coffin.

Later, after Choma, his assistant and the reluctant Nikita have left the cellars of the dead, there is a horrifying sign of life. The fresh blood has revived the "sleeping" sorceress!

Gorodec meets Katia Vajda in the castle. She introduces herself as the granddaughter of the Princess. Gorodec becomes ro-manically interested in Katia, remains behind for the nite when Dr. Choma leaves for the nearby village.

That nite strange and frightening things take place at Castle Vajda:

Katia's father dies tragically.

Katia's brother falls from a cliff.

The butler is found hanged in his room.

And even Dr. Choma, when he returns to the castle, is transformed into a vampire!

The next nite, lured by an evil force greater than her will, Katia finds herself face to face in the foul catacomb with the resurrected Vampire Princess.

But there is a happy ending.

The film is of Italian origin, titled LA MASCHERA DEL DEMONIO in the original.

—This has been a report by Gio Scognamiglio, who just married a vamp (not, we trust, a vampire) and to whom the staff of FM extends its heartiest congratulations.

LON

SON OF MISTER MONSTER

Chaney Jr. in his best-remembered, most dramatic role as the powerful but childlike moron in OF MICE AND MEN (1939).

Rudolph Valentino? No, the Chaney Jr. of 3 decades ago.

His Father was a Living Legend: a Hunchback, a blind man, a 100-year-old Mandarin, a ventriloquist, an ape-man, a mad scientist, an armless freak, a human vampire. . .

It is hard to follow in your Father's footsteps when he may have been a spider or a bat; or, worse than that, have had no legs at all!

Lon Chaney Sr., Master Monster No. 1 died in 1930.

Lon Chaney Jr. made his first screen appearance 2 years later, in 1932, at the age of 26.

Born Creighton Tull Chaney in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, in 1906, the son of the King of Characterizations was destined to become known to the film world as Lon Chaney Jr.

he died a thousand times

His Father was in pictures 17 years, appeared in approximately 135 productions. Today, as he looks back over 28 years in the motion picture industry, Lon Chaney Jr. can say, "Dieing has been my living," for he has been killed time and again, and in fact one of his films was called I DIED A THOUSAND TIMES!

Lon Jr. has been shot, stabbed, strangled, electrocuted, drowned, burned and generally killed in so many ways, only to return to menace still another horrified heroine, that it was inevitable he should be cast in the role of THE INDESTRUCTIBLE MAN.

But before we get too deep into a consideration of the cinematic career of Lon Chaney Jr., let us turn back the clock to the time when he was just a moviegoer—or even earlier—instead of a movie actor.

ham and hot water

Creighton found out in the first 7 years of his life that his Father was a "ham", an actor. Junior toured the country with Senior, and as a young boy got the smell of greasepaint in his nostrils as he watched his pop perform in stock companies thruout the middle western states.

When Lon Chaney Sr. entered motion pictures, Jr. entered hi school—Hollywood High School. Upon completion of his studies there he became associated with, of all things, a Los Angeles water heater business!

Can you imagine the loss to the world if today Lon Jr. were President of the Creighton Chaney Champion Hot Water Co. instead of a 28-year-veteran of motion pictures? We can indeed be tankful that he chose to get a different kind of hot water!

frankenstein . . . the mummy . . . dracula

Lon Chaney Sr. had been the world's hottest horror property. Properly, when he died, his son should have taken his place. But it was to be 2 years before Jr. stepped before a camera. In the meantime Boris Karloff and Bela Lugosi; and, to a lesser extent, Claude Rains; came to the fore as exponents of horror in FRANKENSTEIN, THE INVISIBLE MAN, THE MUMMY, DRACULA, THE BRIDE OF FRANKENSTEIN, THE OLD DARK HOUSE and other early Universal hits. Lon Chaney Jr. would one day act for Universal in various versions of DRACULA, FRANKENSTEIN and THE MUMMY, but his earliest emoting was for RKO in action and adventure pictures like BIRD OF PARADISE (1932), LUCKY DEVILS (with Bill Boyd; 1933), SCARLET RIVER and SON OF THE BORDER (1933 westerns with Tom Keene).

Lon Jr. starred in an RKO serial, THE LAST FRONTIER, a brawling bloody thriller, in the early '30s.

In 1934 he starred in Monogram's first version of SIXTEEN FATHOMS DEEP; 14 years later Lloyd Bridges starred in a remake of the famous submarine adventure film, with Lon playing the part of the villain.

Meanwhile, Chaney the man was distinguishing himself in the fields of amateur wrestling, swimming and tennis playing, while his hobbies at the time were hunting and fishing.

Around this period he also appeared in THE SHADOW OF SILK LENNOX (gangster film), CAPTAIN HURRICANE, THE THREE MUSKETEERS

This characterization as THE WOLF-MAN won Chaney Jr. the New York TV Award as Monster of the Year in 1959.

As Hava, the tongueless Captain of the Guards, in COBRA WOMAN, Technicolor adventure thriller with Jon Hall, Maria Montez and Sabu.

(John Wayne's starring serial for Mascot, an adventure romp of ruff 'n' ready Foreign Legionnaires) and THE SINGING COWBOY, the latter a Gene Autry musical western wherein Lon Jr. played a villainous rancher.

twenty years of terror

It was roughly 20 years ago that Lon Chaney Jr. began to appear in horror roles and build a reputation in the league with Peter Lorre, Basil Rathbone, George Zucco, Lionel Atwill and other regulars of "irregular" characterizations.

In MAN-MADE MONSTER, based on the story "The Electric Man", he absorbed a dose of energy that made him almost invincible—a terrifying prospect for his enemies.

In ONE MILLION B.C. (Before Chaney) Lon Jr. was a caveman surrounded by prehistoric monsters. In this action epic of ancient times Lon shared dangers with Victor Mature and took quite a goring at the huge deadly tusks of an enraged mastodon, giant elephant-like beast of the primitive world.

Then Lon Chaney Jr. created a characterization for which he was to be long remembered. "He is best known in horror films for his role as THE WOLFMAN (1941) and in sequels to this film," Samuel M. Sherman (FM's Film Historian) has said, pointing out that: "It is quite interesting that Lon Jr. and his Father should be so different in direct character types and yet in monster-type roles evoke the same type of pity. Lon Sr.'s films always had him playing a monster who was hideous but yet one to be pitied. His son brought across this same quality when he began playing horror parts."

The gory result of Lon's fall from Ivory Terror in ONE MILLION BC.

Mexican Mad Lab has Lon Jr. as House Guest in HOUSE OF TERROR.

This fugitive foto from our companion periodical, WILDEST WESTERN, shows Lon Chaney Jr. as Indian in Republic's 1956 production of DANIEL BOONE, TRAIL-BLAZER, with Bruce Bennett (one-time Tarzan).

the ghoulden years

1941 found Lon Jr. making a hit in THE WOLFMAN. Because of his success in the lycanthropic makeup, the next year he was assigned the task of filling Boris Karloff's boots and—

1942 saw Chaney standing 6' 9" tall, weighing 284 lbs. and menacing Lionel Atwill, Sir Cedric Hardwicke and others as THE GHOST OF FRANKENSTEIN. It was Bela Lugosi, as Igor, who unearthed Lon in this one; the following year, Lon returned the compliment when he, as Larry Talbot, dug Bela, as the Frankenstein monster, out of deep freeze.

1943 offered Lon not only in FRANKENSTEIN MEETS THE WOLF MAN but as THE SON OF DRACULA (scripted by Curt Siodmak) and in CALLING DR. DEATH.

1944 was another ghostly year for the son of Chaney as he essayed the role of the crumbling 3000-year-old Egyptian, Kharis, in THE MUMMY'S GHOST. Same year Lon Jr. also appeared in DEAD MAN'S EYES and WEIRD WOMAN.

hard year to stay alive: '45

1945 was a twelve month period wherein Lon was so busy trying to keep body and soul together that it seemed like a 13 month year to him. Time and again he lost his life, only to come back for more punishment. He was THE FROZEN GHOST. In THE MUMMY'S CURSE he (again as Kharis) gets the tana leaf treatment from Dr. Ilzor Zandaab, and is temporarily restored to life—long enuf, at least, to be involved with 3 other people who lose theirs. In HOUSE OF DRACULA he is once again Larry Talbot, lycanthrope who turns into a man-wolf when the moon is full. Before the year (1945) is out, Lon is back—this time in THE HOUSE OF FRANKENSTEIN. Lon doesn't make his appearance till toward the end, the beginning of the film chronicling the nefarious doings of Dr. Gustav Niemann (Boris Karloff) who, after having been imprisoned for 15 years because of sinister scientific experimentation, escapes in the company of a psychopathic killer, J. Carrol Naish. This strange pair meets up with Professor Lampini (the late George Zucco), proprietor of a traveling horror show, who is killed shortly thereafter and Dr. Niemann takes over. Later, in the ruins of the Frankenstein laboratory, Karloff discovers the Monster (again Glenn Strange) and the Wolf Man (Lon Jr.) encased in ice; defrosts them, but the Wolf Man does not live long when he gets the urge to sink his fangs into the neck of lovely Gypsy dancer Ilonka and instead gets shot.

Will Lon one day catch up with the thousand faces of his Father? He's had varied roles in THE BRIDE AND THE GORILLA, STRANGE CONFESSION (THE MISSING HEAD), CYCLOPS, ABBOTT & COSTELLO MEET FRANKENSTEIN, BLACK CASTLE, PILLOW OF DEATH, BLACK SLEEP and—his latest appearance—in Mexico's LA MOMIA. Soon to be released on TV is the No. 13 DEMON STREET series, shot in Sweden under the direction of scripter Curt Siodmak, with segments such as Fever, Girl in Ice, Mirror and The Fortune Teller. Creighton Tull Chaney tackles Tullervision! May he have good fortune and continue to thrill his fans with at least another 100 faces before he joins his Father in Horrorama's Valhalla of Fame.

their battered boat on the little island of Nara, off the Irish coast.

Ryan & Slade receive a cool reception on Nara. There before them is a man named McCartin, an archaeologist from Dublin who claims to be retrieving scientifically valuable relics from the ocean's depths. McCartin makes it plain that Ryan & Slade are not welcome.

Only little Sean, a young boy of the island, is friendly to the involuntary visitors.

Ryan & Slade have their curiosity aroused by McCartin's hostile attitude and determine to learn the cause of his anxiety.

The answer lies in sunken treasure.

Divers in McCartin's employ are bringing up pieces of gold from the ocean floor.

Then, one day, one of the divers discovers something more—and dies of fright!

"arrachtach!"

The father of young Sean surfaces in panic, utters one word before he shudders and dies of pure horror.

The word is a weird-sounding one in the Gaelic tongue: arrachtach!

It means—

MONSTER!

But—a monster in modern times? A monster has repeatedly been rumored in the Loch Ness of Scotland, but in the waters off the coast of Ireland?

Nevertheless, a man is dead of heart failure.

Ryan & Slade decide to investigate. Secretly, they dive; almost immediately Slade is attacked by the tentacle of an octopus. It is huge and fearsome, the octopus, but not unknown—not quite a monster to freeze the heart. Ryan, swimming to Slade's assistance, also is enmeshed by the sea-beast, but manages to pierce a vital organ with his powerful harpoon gun, killing the octopus.

Recuperating under water from their near brush with death, Ryan & Slade keep a wary eye on a killer whale which swims restlessly above them. Suddenly, a huge shadow darkens the fathoms above them. There is a swirling of water that whirls Ryan & Slade around like puppets and the water deepens in darkness to blood red!

the sea god

That nite the owner of the sea shadow makes its first appearance on the island.

GORGO is after a hand-out—and it's bigger than boat of us.

The islanders scream its name: Ogra!—the Monster of Nara. We come to know it by another name: GORGO.

Carson Bingham, in the pocketbook he has written about the King Bros. production, tells graphically of the moments of horror when Gorgo is first glimpsed. In the author's own words:

"The sea lifted up under the flickering procession of funeral boats, and a form that was neither water nor earth nor human reared into the air.

"Rooted to the spot, I stared at what seemed to be a huge, massive shape writhing out of the water.

"I could see the outline of a huge body, some 20 feet high.

"'My God!' I cried. 'It's huge! As big as a house!'"

And so it is. Waked from an ages long sleep by the underwater explosion, the gorgosaurus has surfaced in a strange new world, a world where frightened shouting men shoot at it. But the rifle bullets bounce from Gorgo's tough hide like ping-pong balls. Only fire affects Gorgo, and when Ryan & Slade lead the men in throwing burning brands at the incredible beast, with an angry flick of its long prehensile tail it turns back to the sea and disappears beneath the waves.

ocean floor would be Gorgo, captured and alive. Ryan & Slade realize this and set out to ensnare the saurian in a steel net. In a harrowing encounter they are successful and word of their astounding feat makes headlines and telecasts thruout the entire civilized world.

The Irish government sends 2 ranking paleontologists to meet the now famous pair and their prize possession. The paleontologists intend to claim the live specimen for the University of Dublin but the partners who captured it have a more lucrative disposition in mind.

Slade & Ryan sail to London with their supersaurian and make a very profitable monetary arrangement with the owner of Dorkin's Circus.

The lad Sean, an orphan since his father died of fright upon first glimpsing Gorgo, has been more or less adopted by Slade & Ryan. Sean feels a keen sense of sadness for the shackled creature and attempted to set it free before his friends ever got it to London. He had been stopped in time but his action had resulted in the death of a watchman who was mortally mangled a swipe of the beast's mighty claw.

At the circus Gorgo almost breaks loose. He does kill an elephant in a strange battle of prehistoric beast pitted against modern behemoth. It is at this time that Slade for the first time has misgivings. Slade himself now joins Sean in an attempt to set Gorgo free but Ryan thwarts the plan and gets into a fight with his friend.

Startling word comes from Dublin: Gorgo is but a baby! This huge creature, it develops, is only an infant. If the world's biggest child is already 65' long, how big may its parent not have been?

Its parent!

If Gorgo is a newborn saurian, then it's suddenly (and frighteningly) apparent that it may have had a mother or father nearby.

Based on the age and measurements of Gorgo Jr., mama or papa monster would measure about—

Two hundred feet long!

Almost simultaneous with this discovery comes word that Nara Island has mysteriously disappeared. Shortly thereafter the world's worst fears are realized.

Nets to you, GORGO! Is the great beast doomed to spend his final days in Disneyland?

When GORGO's Mama comes to town, London Bridge is falling down!

mrs. gorgo!

Gorgo Jr. has a real queen size mother and she's on her way to rescue her baby!

A destroyer, dispatched to try to halt the 200' beast, is bismarcked to the bottom of the sea. All hands aboard are lost in the churning wake of the striding terror.

Despite every military effort the mighty monster makes its way up the Thames and across the teeming city of London, sending national monuments crashing like bowling pins, crushing busses and people like eggshells.

Big Ben . . . Westminster Abbey . . . the Houses of Parliament . . . and the Thames Tower Bridge—all are left twisted ruins by the great Gorgo's rage and rampage.

The populace flees in terror, including Ryan & Slade who have been reunited by their common peril. With the partners is young Sean, in sympathy to the end with the lonely beast and its all-powerful parent.

The havoc does not end until the giant mother reaches her offspring's side. Then, the two Gorgos, contemptuous of the highest explosives mankind has been able to hurl at them; mother and son Gorgo turn their armor-plated backs on the strange little creatures (humans) who sting them, and make their way back to the river and thence to the sea.

ambitious enterprise

GORGO is the most costly, time-consuming production the King Bros. have made to date—and 38 productions have rolled off their slate.

The picture introduces the new process known as Automotion, which makes the movements of the "stars" (Gorgos I & II) extremely lifelike. If you like excitement and suspense with your movie monsters—we recommend GORGO.

DR. MR. Jekyll & Hyde

The two-faced, tormented character of Dr. Henry Jekyll and Mr. Edward Hyde, together with a sinister son and a diabolical daughter, has had at least 18 incarnations on the screen over a period of 25 years! No other horror concept can stretch that long, with the durable Dracula coming close.

For the serious student a chronological list of the Jekyll-Hyde films appears at the end of this article. It is interesting to note that one of the first versions made in 1920, the Gentleman, featured both Conrad Veidt and Bela Lugosi. The American version made 41 years ago, starring John Barrymore, still is shown from year to year throughout the United States in theaters specializing in silent movies and movies of ancient rarities.

As it is the best known version of an Oscar-winning performance by Fredric March in the difficult dual role, we will give special emphasis in this article to the Paramount version of 1932.

the theory of evil

In an English University in the days of gas-lit London, Dr. Jekyll (Fredric March) addresses an assembly of scientists and students:

"Gentlemen: London is so full of fog that it has penetrated our brains, set boundaries for our vision. As men of science, we should be curious and bold enough to peer beyond it into the many wonders it conceals.

"I shall not dwell today on the human body, in sickness and in health; today I want to talk to you of a greater mystery, the soul of Man.

"My analysis of this Soul—the human psyche—leads me to believe that man is not truly one... but truly two. One of him strives for the nobilities of life; this we call his good self. The other seeks an expression of impulses that binds him with some dim animal relation with the earth; this we may call the bad. These two carry on an eternal struggle in the nature of man, yet they are chained together; and that chain spells repression to the evil, remorse to the good.

"Now, if these two selves could be separated from each other, how much better the good in us might be, what heights it might scale; and the so-called evil, once liberated, would fulfill itself and trouble us no more. I believe that the day may not be far off when this separation will be possible. In my experiments I have found that certain chemicals have the power and the—"

The scene shifts.

Some nites after his lecture Henry Jekyll sits brooding in his laboratory. His fiancée is away on a protracted stay and he is restless. His man-servant has suggested some kind of female entertainment but a gentleman in the doctor's position cannot risk it. Yet, unbidden, unwanted desires keep kindling little fires in Dr. Jekyll's human body until at last, recalling his discovery, he decides to put it to the test.

Locking his door against intrusion, he sets about, step by careful step, mixing dry chemicals and liquids to create the solution which he believes will liberate the evil which is festering in his system; until, at last, the potion completely prepared, he stands before a mirror and gulps the contents of the bubbling, steaming glass.

A rare photo of Sheldon Lewis in an early silent edition of the great classic. He never should have drunk that formalde-Hyde!

Gad, who dat—Mrs. Hyde?

In fear and wonder he watches the remarkable transformation.

Contrary to theory, the evil side is asserting itself!

He groans and chokes and his facial muscles struggle to retain his natural appearance as his face and form undergo a dark and terrible change. As Stevenson described him, and writer John Mason Brown later summed him up, he had "something wrong about him, something displeasing, downright detestable and deformed. He was troglodytic, ape-like, wicked-looking, monkey-like, a rat, shocking, abnormal and misbegotten." In the words of the author, "he had Satan's signature upon his face."

terrifying transformation

How effective was Fredric March's change from the gentle Dr. Jekyll to the horrid Mr. Hyde? First rate! It would be difficult to imagine a better realization of the role. And it was accomplished in almost direct view of the audience, with very little camera cheating. Half a dozen visual changes were gradually observed as his hands turned brown and hairy, his fingers grew nails long and claw-like, his white teeth became black and protruding, his eyes watery and sunken and dark-rimmed, his hair a bushy mat, his body hunched. In a few fantastic minutes a fine figure of a man, thru camera magic, has become a coarse, gross, bestial creature, the evil manifestation of his nature which the doctor calls Mr. Hyde.

Oblivious to the rain, this evil caricature of Dr. Jekyll strides out into the nite and at a cheap dance hall forces his attentions on a girl named Ivy who is helpless before his overpowering personality. She doesn't dream that this brutish male is the refined and handsome Dr. Jekyll who earlier that same evening had politely tended to her when she had been slightly injured.

in horror's grip

Poor Ivy is haunted more and more by Mr. Hyde as time goes by and Jekyll's fiancée postpones their wedding, driving him in desperation to dreadful deeds of violence with Ivy. At last, almost beside herself with fear, Ivy calls on Dr. Jekyll and pleads with him to help her escape from the domination of the dreadful Mr. Hyde.

Dr. Jekyll is horrified when he sees him-

"A glass of milk each nite before retiring is my secret for good strong teeth," reveals Mr. Hyde in the Frederic March version.

"I know I'm not Tony Curtis," says Frederic March to Miriam Hopkins in the 1932 edition, "but, then who is?"

self thru the eyes of this distraught woman and determines to have nothing further to do with his formula. In all sincerity he promises Ivy that she will never see the wicked creature Hyde again but Jekyll reckons without the cumulative power of the drug he has been taking, which now causes his transformation even without an added dose!

Soon after Ivy's visit, Jekyll's monster-self irrepressibly surges forth! As Hyde, he seeks out Ivy and she shrieks "You must be the Devil in human form!" when he informs her he knows all about her visit to Dr. Jekyll. "Impossible!" she cries; "I was alone with the doctor in his room—you couldn't possibly know of our conversation." To which Hyde replies: "I am going to tell you my secret—a secret so great that those who know it cannot share it with me . . . and live." Afterward he strangles Ivy.

Quickly, now, the story comes to its familiar climax, with Hyde locked out of the laboratory and unable to get at the antidote which will return him to normalcy. He is forced to reveal his secret to his best friend, Lanyon. Then, temporarily returned to himself, Jekyll goes to his sweetheart, but the change comes over him and he kills her father. He realizes now he is done for, and racers for his laboratory, where the police finally catch up with him and kill him.

In death, the evil features of Hyde dissolve, leaving the corpse of the unfortunate Dr. Jekyll.

hyde's other hides

John Barrymore relied less on extravagant makeup and more on exaggerated acting in his interpretation of Mr. Hyde.

Spencer Tracy's changes were more psychological than physical, altho his features were brutalized by the makeup department. Outstanding in this version was a symbolical delirium sequence with Lana Turner and Ingrid Bergman.

DER JANUSKOPF (JANUS-FACED) was the name of the German adaptation of 1920 directed by F. W. Murnau and featuring Conrad Veidt and Bela Lugosi. Janus was a mythical Roman god believed to have 2 heads, and indeed no one could argue that Dr. Jekyll was not indeed "two-faced". It is not known at this time (perhaps some knowledgeable reader can inform us) who played the role of Jekyll-Hyde in JANUS-FACED, but it seems most probable it was

"I was just Costellophoning," explains heroine in harrowing moment from A&C MEET DR. J&H.

Long Caney? No, Mr. Hyde in the Abbott & Costello spoof of Stevenson's story.

"You could be the new Scarface," says Mr. Hyde, as he offers to do battle with chap who criticized his good looks.

Conrad Veidt as he was better known than Bela Lugosi at the time.

Ten years ago Louis Hayward portrayed THE SON OF DR. JEKYLL and in 1957 Gloria Talbot was THE DAUGHTER OF DR. JEKYLL. Same year ('57) United Artists released a film called THE VAMPIRE which, altho not an actual adaptation of "Jekyll & Hyde", was sufficiently in the genre for Variety's reviewer to observe: "Combo of the 'Jekyll & Hyde' and 'Dracula' themes make this a good entry for the horror market. Makeup of John Beal reminiscent of the 'Mr. Hyde' character."

Five years ago it was announced that a musical version of J&H in the form of an opera was being prepared for Broadway but the project apparently died aborning for nothing further was heard of Dr. Jekyll & Mr. Hyde in Harlem.

In France, Jean Marais (of BEAUTY AND THE BEAST fame) is scheduled to star in THE TESTAMENT OF DR. CORDELIER, based on J&H.

jekyll-hyde 1961

The latest version of J&H is known as THE TWO FACES OF DR. JEKYLL and comes to us, in Technicolor, from England. Another Hammer Film, it presents Christopher Lee; but, peculiarly, he does not play the dual role as one would expect. Instead, a newcomer to horror—Paul Massie—esays the double characterization. Our British reporter, Alan Dodd, informs us that:

There's a switch in this one: whereas in the previous versions the transformation from Jekyll to Hyde has been one of handsomeness to ugliness, in the new picture it is quite the reverse—bearded to begin with, Jekyll becomes a smooth-shaven good-looking young man-about-town as Mr. Hyde! But, as Hyde, this gentleman of the Victorian era displays something less than Victorian manners.

Quite something less!

Dr. Jekyll, experimenting on himself to separate man's 2 distinct personalities, succeeds in freeing his evil valence from all restrictions of morality, and as a kind of suave and sinister Dorian Gray goes on a spree of sin and savagery.

Two people die at Hyde's hands.

He drives his own (that is, Dr. Jekyll's) wife to suicide.

And he adds arson to his previous "accomplishments".

Christopher Lee is seen as one of Hyde's victims, a snake dancer's serpent being the cause of his shuddersome death. Dawn Adams plunges to her death and another young lady is strangled. Altogether, Mr. Hyde gives a good (?) account of himself.

And so, as we sink into our coffin at sunrise, it is with this last lingering shot while we prepare for our daily bat-nap: will Jekyll & Hyde be back a number of times more in the next quarter century? We shouldn't be surprised.

the weird and wonderful pictures of EDGAR ALLAN

POE

HE WAS THE MASTER OF THE MACABRE.
PROOF? HIS WRITTEN WORDS HAVE BEEN FILMED OVER A QUARTER HUNDRED TIMES!

by Giovanni Scognamillo

Edgar Allan Poe was only on this earth 40 years. Born in 1809, he died in 1849. But in the 60-odd years of its life the motion picture screen has brought Poe back to life approximately 30 times.

Sixty years after his untimely death Poe's strange and tragic existence was portrayed for the first time (1909) in a short feature simply bearing his name. Realized by one of the greatest, if not the greatest, names in motion picture history—the late David Wark Griffith—EDGAR ALLAN POE was an American Mutoscope & Biograph Co. Production starring Herbert Jost as Poe.

Five years later, in 1914, a more complete attempt to recreate Poe's mastery of horror and suspense was undertaken in THE AVENGING CONSCIENCE. This was a 3-in-1 adaptation (by Griffith himself) of Poe's short stories, "The Tell-Tale Heart"

ERIK—The Gorilla with a Human Brain is the translation of the sign in French over the entranceway to the sideshow of Dr. Mirakle in the 1932 version of Poe's MURDERS IN THE RUE MORGUE.

Quoth the Raven: "What's up, doc?" Bela Lugosi in a scene from THE RAVEN.

Half his face and body paralyzed by Lugosi, Karloff arouses combination of pity and horror in Irene Ware. (THE RAVEN) and "The Pit and the Pendulum", and the poem, "Annabel Lee". The trio starred Henry B. Walthall, Dorothy Gish, Donald Crisp and Blanche Sweet. THE AVENGING CONSCIENCE seems to have been the first fantastic horror show produced in America and also an ingenious amalgamation of Poe's basic themes: murder and remorse ("The Tell-Tale Heart"), mental anguish ("The Pit and the Pendulum") and haunting affection for his wife Virginia ("Annabel Lee").

At about the same time, in France, Maurice Tourneur directed LE SYSTEME DU DOCTEUR GOUDRON ET DU PROFESSEUR PLUME (THE SYSTEM OF DR. TARR & PROFESSOR FETHER) and in America THE MURDERS IN THE RUE MORGUE reached the screen for the first time via the direction of Sol A. Rosenber. Of the French film historians report that it was more grotesque than frightening.

Lost and all but forgotten is a 1915 filming of THE RAVEN. Starring Henry B. Walthall, it was an Essanay production directed by Geo. C. Hazelton.

In 1927 & '28 nonprofessional and experimental filmmakers tried their luck with Poe. First Geo. Kelin directed THE TELL-TALE HEART (later on, in 1941, it was Jules Dassin's turn with a 2-reel short featuring Jos. Schildkraut for MGM), followed by THE FALL OF THE HOUSE OF USHER, directed by Jas. Sibley Watson with art direction by Melville Webber. Both pictures were highly interesting studies in recapturing thru purely filmic effects, distorted camera angles, elaborate and arty shots, contrasted editing and impressionistic art direction, the morbid and horrifying climate of Poe. Also in '28, in France, Jean Epstein professionally directed THE FALL OF THE HOUSE OF USHER, with emphasis more on the architectural problems, in recreating the morbid, disturbing and nightmarish atmosphere of the castle, than in focusing on the psychic problems of Roderick Usher.

In 1942 teenage Curtis Harrington, who has since made his mark in the experimental and surrealistic film world and is now moving into the realm of professional fantasy scripter and producer-director—young Harrington made a version of USHER in which he foreshadowed Tony (PSYCHO) Perk-

"I am not a sideshow charlatan," Dr. Mirakle thinks to himself as he ponders his experiments with the great ape and records his thoughts in his diary. (MURDERS IN THE RUE MORGUE) ins by playing a dual role, masculine & feminine. In 1948 another USHER was made in England and of course the Vincent Price (star), Richard Matheson (scripter), Burt Schoenberg (art) technicolor version of 1960 was one of the big horror hits of last year.

The tale of THE TELL-TALE HEART was told again in 1934 as BUCKET OF BLOOD, a British production directed by Brian Desmond Hurst with Norman Dryden; and UPA did it in 1954 as a color "cartoon" short which attained stature.

Paul (THE GOLEM) Wegener starred in 1933 in a German trio titled LIVING DEAD, comprised of Poe's "Black Cat" and "Tarr & Fether" plus Stevenson's "Suicide Club".

In America 1932, '34 & '35 were Poe years with Robt. Florey directing Bela Lugosi in MURDERS IN THE RUE MORGUE, Edgar Ulmer directing Karloff & Lugosi in THE BLACK CAT, and Karloff & Lugosi being reunited in THE RAVEN (directed by Louis Friedlander). THE RAVEN was remade in '48 by Westport International, English Lippert '53 and a special short directed by Lew Jacobs in '54.

The late Maria Montez starred in THE MYSTERY OF MARIE ROGET, directed for Universal in 1944 by Geo. Wagner.

1948: HISTOIRES EXTRAORDINAIRES (UNUSUAL TALES), a French grandguignol'esque trio combining "Cask of Amontillado" and another tale by Poe with "Ecce Homo" by Thos. de Quincey.

Karloff & Lugosi at each others' throats again. This time in THE BLACK CAT (1934).

1954: THE PHANTOM OF THE RUE MORGUE, Warner color and 3D, with Steve Forrest as Dupin. Karl Malden as the Mad Doctor, Patricia Medina as the heroine—and the irreplaceable killer ape.

1956: MANFISH, combination of "The Tell-Tale Heart" and "The Gold Bug", with Victor Jory, John Bromfield and Lon Chaney Jr.

Two semi-biographical treatments of Poe's life have been filmed, THE LOVES OF EDGAR ALLAN POE, an unfortunately rather boring and unsuccessful film by Harry Lachman, and THE MAN WITH A CLOAK, starring Jos. Cotten and Barbara Stanwyck, directed by Fletcher Markle.

Announced for the future: THE MASK

OF THE RED DEATH (Alex & Ruth Gordon). THE PIT AND THE PENDULUM (Richard Matheson). And an American Edgar Allan Poe Mystery Theater of Television.

Earnestly recommended for filming: A DESCENT INTO THE MAELSTROM (Disney, Pal) and THE FACTS IN THE CASE OF M. VALDMAR (Castle, American-International).

As long as horror films have a vogue, Edgar Allan Poe will provide steady source material for first-class fright features. His classics constitute a rich dark literary loam in which mandrakes grow and nuggets of unnerving nightmare lie waiting to be unearthed and transferred to the screen. END

Erik turns on his master, Bela Lugosi, and the blood runs red on Morgue Street.
